A PROCLAMATION.

WHEREAS, I the said Plenipotentiary, in virtue of the powers and authority in me vested, have entered into certain preliminary articles, with the undersigned chiefs and warriors of Indian tribes—The Wyandot, Delaware, Ottawa, Pottawatamie, Miami, Eel River and Weea nations, for the cessation of hostilities, and for the mutual liberation of all prisoners of every description, as well as for settling a general treaty, for settling all things of controversy, and for establishing a permanent peace between the United States and the aforesaid tribes of Indians, on or about the 15th day of June next.

Wherefore, I do hereby, in the name of the President of the United States, prohibit and forbid, all and every person and persons from killing, injuring or ravaging any Indian or Indians, belonging to the aforesaid tribes or nations, or either of them (unless in their own defence) And I do hereby, also forbid any party or parties, citizens of the United States, or either of them, from entering the Indian country north-west of the Ohio, with hostile intentions, (without permission from proper authority first obtained) between this period and the end of the pending treaty, as they will answer a contrary conduct at their peril.

Section VI. And be it further enacted by the authority aforeſaid, That the ſaid commiſſioners ſhall file a draft return and report of the ſurvey and proceedings made and executed with reſpect to the ſaid laſt mentioned town and lots, and the governor ſhall proceed to ſell at public auction and to convey to the reſpective purchaſers one third of the town lots and one third of the out-lots in like manner with like power and authority and ſubject to the like regulations, reſtrictions, terms, conditions, and forfeitures, as are herein-before provided touching the ſurvey, return, ſale, and conveyance of the town lots and out lots, directed to be laid out at or near to Preſq' Iſle.

LONDON, February 21.

By letters from Frankfort we learn that the French have raiſed the ſiege of Mentz; and moſt of their troops employed in that expedition have marched towards Holland. Feb. 13 It is with much ſatisfaction we are enabled to lay before the public the true ſtate of affairs on the continent, according to the moſt recent advices received from abroad on Friday laſt.

The retreat of the Britiſh army to Deventer, was attended with great inconveniences though with very inconſiderable loſs taking all the circumſtances of the caſe into conſideration. The weather during two days of this march, was the moſt ſevere of any this ſeaſon, vigorous as it has been in all parts of Europe. The natural conſequences of this was, that a few of our ſoldiers, who were moſt infirm, periſhed from the cold: and ſo did ſeveral of the women who followed the army. The loſs however, from the time of leaving Amers fort to their arrival at Deventer, did not, including men, women, and children, amount to 200 perſons. So far from our army harraſſed in its retreat, ſcarce a gun was fired on either ſide.

Being arrived at Deventer, the army halted there and in the neighbourhood 14 days, and then marched into its winter cantonments. The head quarters from Gen. Harcourt and a few regiments being there, were on the 10th, at Oſnabruck; but the line of the advanced poſt [illegible] river Ems; nor is there [illegible] henſlod entertained of [illegible] leſted.

"We promiſed you, citizens, to [illegible] ſas either through the gates, or [illegible] breach. The Spaniards, however, [illegible] wiſh to be reduced to this laſt [illegible] they ſurrendered at diſcretion to [illegible] army of the Eaſtern pyrennees have [illegible] that during the ſiege, they conquered [illegible] try even of the elements. At the [illegible] ment it was neceſſary to cut roads in [illegible] tains hitherto deemed inacceſſible. Our brave brethern in arms behave with indefatigable zeal; they draw the artillery, mortars, and all the ſtores themſelves. This was a neceſſary preliminary to the capture of the of Bouton, which enabled us to keep in the naval force of the enemy, in the bay of Roſas.

Bouton being taken, the firſt parallel was ſoon opened before the gates of Roſas; but the violent rain and ſnow filled the trenches with water, and 23 days elapſed before we could reſume our operations. The impoſſibility of opening the ſecond parallel determined us to adopt a new plan of attack, juſtified by the rules of art but certainly a good plan, becauſe it enabled us to batter breach. A little hill was favourable to our operations. The order was given, and in the night of 10th a battery of eighteen mortars was begun and compleated. In the morning of the 14th we began to batter breach, and hardly had the firſt ſhot been fired, when the volunteers aſked permiſſion to mount—The fire was terrible for two days. The wall was already damaged and the garriſon convinced how vain reſiſtance would be, profited of the darkneſs of the night to embark in great numbers. Five hundred and forty men who remained, ſurrendered at diſcretion this morning and are made priſoners of war.

"It is on the ramparts of Roſas, and in ſight of the Spaniſh ſquadron, which prudently is out of the reach of our cannon, that we are going to celebrate the anniverſary of the juſt puniſhment of the laſt of the Capets.

"We muſt not omit mentioning to the committee, that in addition to the labours of ſo painful a ſiege, our brave brethern have had to endure rain, ſnow and hail, and yet nothing has ſhaken their courage and zeal. The general, officers of artillery, and all the other officers have diſcharged their duty with indefatigable activity.

"The National Convention, always juſt, will again, we truſt, decree, and not for the laſt time, that the army of the Eaſtern Pyrenees ceaſe not to deſerve well of their country.

A dispatch, dated Edinburgh, Feb. 28, [illegible], of which the following is an extract, [illegible] been received by his royal highness the [illegible]ke of York, from the hon. Lieut. Gen. [illegible]court, and communicated by his royal [illegible]ghness to the right hon. Henry Dundas, [illegible] of his majesty's principal secretaries of [illegible]tate.

"I feel, [illegible] time in acquainting your royal [illegible]ghness, that on the 14th inst. the enemy [illegible]dvanced in force upon the posts of Nieu[illegible]poort and Velthuys, which were under the [illegible]ommand of Lieut. Col. Strutt, and occu[illegible]ied by the royal Emigrants, and a detach[illegible]ment of Rohan and Bouille's corps. Those [illegible]oops, after the most gallant resistance, were [illegible]orced with the loss of about one hundred [illegible]illed and wounded, to fall back upon [illegible]orthorn, and the French occupied those [illegible]posts in some force. They also surpri[illegible]sed a small picquet of Salm and Hompesch [illegible]ussars in Oldenzaal, which they occupied, [illegible]but were repulsed, when advancing on this [illegible]side of that place. Lieut. general Aber[illegible]crombie, who commands at Eutheim, &c. [illegible]intended to attack and reoccupy the posts of [illegible]Nieuheyzand Velthuys. This measure was, [illegible]however, rendered unnecessary, by the re[illegible]treat of the French who left all those posts [illegible]on the 26th, directing their march towards [illegible]Ingelberg, and Lieutenant Col. Strutt im[illegible]mediately re-occupied them.

"The last reports we have received state [illegible]that the enemy are precipitately march[illegible]ing their troops from Hardenberg and [illegible]Steenwigen towards Zwoll, and that they [illegible]have even evacuated Covoerden, taking [illegible]with them the ammunition and part of the [illegible]cannon from that place.

DUBLIN, Feb. 27.

"With reluctance we announce the report [illegible] a misfortune as sudden and unexpected [illegible]ever agitated the public mind—no less [illegible] the premature recall of the most popu[illegible]lar governor this country was ever fa[illegible]voured with, and the consequent removal of [illegible]men who possessed and deserved the con[illegible]fidence of the people. This measure, so [illegible]calculated to depress the spirit of the nation, [illegible]is difficult to account for! lately there [illegible]was room to hope, that the hitherto ill-fated inha[illegible]bitants of this country would be shortly re[illegible]lieved from the grievances they laboured un[illegible]der. The government proposed most salu[illegible]tary measures, and the parliament seemed [illegible]disposed to adopt them; in the interim a vote [illegible]passed for an enormous sum of money to [illegible]carry on the war. That being obtained, [illegible]it is said, were proposed to his Ex[illegible]cellency [illegible]

[illegible] address of the Catholics [illegible] Lord Lieutenant, were entertained at a superb Irish dinner by his Excellency in Dublin Castle. Several of the nobility and gentry of the first distinction were, in consequence of invitations, present on this occasion.

The open magnanimity of the Catholics was never more amply displayed than in the meeting at Francis-Chapel last Friday; at once they resolved to send a deputation to his Majesty, and lay their grievances at the feet of the Throne; the moment demanded energy and dispatch; their dearest interests were at stake.

From the unanimity which prevailed in the Exchange last Saturday in passing the resolution in favour of the Catholics, we are happy to observe, it is now considered not as the question of a party, but as one that involves the indisputable interest of Ireland.

March 4. Earl Moira, it is said, is shortly to embark for this kingdom, with his whole army, consisting of about 35,000 men.

We hear that a meeting of the free holders of the county of Wicklow, was to be held yesterday at Wicklow, in order to adopt resolutions at the present critical situation of this country; and that to morrow a meeting of the freeholders of the county of Kildare will be held at Naas for the same purpose.

We understand that in the course of this week, meetings will be likewise held in every county in the kingdom.

We hear the three gentlemen appointed to carry the address of the Catholics of Dublin to his majesty, sailed last night in the Bedborough Packet, Capt. Goddard, for Holyhead.

American Occurrences.

BOSTON April 27.

By an arrival from Bourdeaux, on Saturday last, a letter was received from a gentleman formerly of this town, but now resident in France, informing that a Spanish Ambassador had arrived at Paris; and another from Prussia was on his way thither. We feel a sincere pleasure in hearing that the minister, appointed by the cabinet of Spain, is the patriotic statesman, Count d'Aranda; who, before the revolution, held the same office at the court of France, and was afterwards recalled and promoted prime minister. At the commencement of the present war, he had the honesty to propose pacificatory measures; alledging that France, was the natural protector of Spain, and, in case of hostilities, would be her most formidable enemy. His advice proving unpopular with the grandees, the court was dissmitted; and the clamorous Alcudia, who flattered the vanity of the king, by overrating his military power, succeeded him. The rapid progress of the French, into the heart of the Spanish dominions, has now convinced the humble Dons, that Aranda "has deserved well of his country.

BALTIMORE, April 23.

Verbal accounts brought by the mate of the Nancy from Barbadoes that two merchant ships had arrived from Spithead, 2 days before he sailed; they brought information of 600 transports and victuallers lying at Spithead with troops and ammunition, ready to sail for the West Indies; that the greatest part of St. Lucia was in the hands of the French, but that Granada was not taken, when they sailed—that the French had set fire to a small village called Goupe, a little distance from Granada; but they were repulsed by the militia—that the negroes were every where ready to take up arms, and to sacrifice their lives in defence of liberty.

PHILADELPHIA, May 2.

It appears from a late movement of the French troops, that the French really mean to make a serious attack upon the most exposed circles of the German empire—or that they meditate a decent upon the coast of England, or perhaps both. Tho' Holland now freed is equal by its own energy to the task of resisting any attempts of their ancient masters to recover their authority, the French have in that country upwards of 100,000 men, and are sending thither more troops from the left hand of the Rhine. This force must therefore be intended for extensive operations against the harassed enemies of liberty; indeed it is evidently respectable for active operations against the flying satellites of despotism and at the same time for an attempt on the coast of Britain.

The Rhine and the fortified places on it form the only protection of Germany; but the French have past that barrier in Holland, and have already driven their enemies even over the Ems. All Germany now lays open to their conquering arms. They have forced their enemies from their strong holds, driven them from their rivers and morasses which from the natural defence of the country, who now instead of having to defend a well fortified frontier, must fight the Republicans on even ground, & along an extent of country much more considerable.

If the French stretch to the left towards the sea, they take possession of East Friesland, part of the dominions of the King of Prussia; a country entirely open. This conquest which could not be difficult, would enable them to recruit their cavalry with some of the most valuable horses which the world produces.

If they proceed streight forward they will meet no check but from the harrassed remains of the British troops; they cannot en passant pay a visit to the bishoprick of his royal highness the duke of York, and by all accounts will receive a hearty welcome among his Britannic majesty's liege subjects the Hanoverians.

If they take to the right, down the right bank of the Rhine, they can meet no opposition but from the badness of the roads. Nothing in this quarter protects the heart of Germany but the insignificant town of Munster, which is about the same strength as Coblentz.

Here however the Germans must make a stand if they wish to escape the fate of Holland; thither the French will direct their main strength, while light corps scower the country between Munster and the sea.

Extract of a letter from General Rigaud, dated Aux Cayes 9th of March to a gentleman in this city.

Be pleased to assure all the American merchants who may be in relations with this part of the colony, that the administration here will always exert themselves to the utmost to procure them such advantages as they may wish for and every favourable treatment. If in any circumstance a transitory distress has obliged us to delay for some time the fulfilment of our engagements, we have every reason to expect that we shall soon be able finally to discharge our debts, & I shall do every thing in my power to this effect. We shall the more easily obtain this point as we have the prospect of a good crop, and the tillage goes on with vigor.

From the Independant Chronicle.

April 23.

The following translation of a letter was handed to the Editors by a gentleman of veracity—(We have the original in our possession) dated

Paris, 4th Pluviose, (23d January) 3d year of the Republic.

From the examination of the papers of Mr. Genet, and from information derived from some other particular sources, the Committee of Public Safety have been convinced that the Government of the United States were not friendly to our own; in consequence of which a Member of the Convention moved to take the matter into consideration, in order to demonstrate that fact, but it was overruled on the ground of its being impolitic to agitate a subject of that nature, at that moment, and the order of the day being called for, was decreed accordingly.

"Health and Fraternity!"

Pittsburgh; May 16.

The Legislature of this State have passed a Law, during the last Session, granting a longer time to those who are entitled to receive Donation lands to apply for their patents.

The Hon. THOMAS M'KEAN, Chief Justice, and the Hon. JASPER YEATS, one of the associate Justices of the Supreme Court of this state, arrived here on Saturday last, and on Monday opened a Court of Nisi-prius, but there being no business ready for trial the Court adjourned.

We are informed that one troop of cavalry & three Companies of infantry, are to be continued in this country for the [illegible] longer.

ANECDOTES.

A Clergyman [illegible] took for his text these words—"the flesh, the world and the devil"——and began his sermon in the following manner: "I shall pass over the flesh, touch lightly upon the world, and hasten on as fast as I can to the devil."

A certain Divine in one of the West India Islands, collateral perhaps in point of consanguinity, with the celebrated Spintext, read the psalm one Sunday, and sat down, as usual, while it was sung. Whether unmindful of his sacred function, or over-plied by the labors of the day, the legend saith not; but while his devotional hallelujah [illegible] were paying a tribute to the Sovereign of All, the charitable Parson threw in his mite to the Morphean god. The music at last was finished and the people were waiting for the word, while the venerable dispenser was in a sound sleep. As soon as the deacons observed the fatal catastrophe one of them turned to the Parson, and with an audable voice said to him, "it is out." (meaning the psalm) "Is it," said the Parson, half wakeing——"Well, fill it up again & charge it to Jim Bowers!"

THE members who compose the Washington County TROOP of HORSE, are requested to parade on Friday the fifth day of June next, at ten o'clock A. M. at the house of JACOB PAINTER Esquire, with their arms and accoutrements in good order.
